

BPL is not needed. It will thoroughly destroy HF communications and render my expensive HF equipment useless. Ham radio is only one of the many valuable uses of the HF spectrum and I feel the FCC is only interested in $ and not taking any of the concerns from amateur radio, FEMA and other valuable emergency services seriously. They see only dollar signs. I am extremely upset about how this is being pushed down our throats. There is a reason many countries have already put a stop to this destructive technology. However, the FCC seems hell bent on getting there money and not protecting the HF spectrum of which we have rights too.
